PREFACE.

THE interest in genealogical research grows keener as the years roll by. This once young country finds that it is waxing hoary, and that its past record is somewhat like the lichen-spotted tombstones in the quiet little village graveyard. The memories of its founders are becoming dim; those who knew and loved them have failed from the earth.

Here and there, a name betokens the originator of a family; but whence he came, what he did, who shall find the story? Sometimes, accident brings to light old papers that by their penmanship and wording give some indication of sundry points in the first father's life. This leading was given to us by the letter which has been reproduced for this monograph, and which was kindly loaned for that purpose by its present owner, Mr. Charles Wetter Bowen, of Providence, R. I., to whom I am also indebted for manuscript notes, which he had spent much time in arranging, some years ago, from the personal reminiscences of his aunts, Delia and Sarah, the children of Nancy (Bogman) Sampson, and I here thank him cordially for his ready willingness to loan me what material he possessed, that was pertinent to my subject, and for his kindness in stopping in the midst of a busy life to write out incidents in the lives of those whom he thought were typical Rhode Island women.

I also thank all the other members of the family for their full response to my request to send me reports of what they had done, and how they had served in their day and generation.

I have made use of the genealogy of the Pope Family in compiling the article for the members which were connected with the Bogman line, and also of letters written by some of its living descendants.

As it has been for some time past my intention to send my son Charles Bogman to America, there to learn the Trade of a Brick Layer, in all its Branches, to <sup>learn</sup> the hewing of stone, the Nature & mixing Cement and to go through the whole, and work at every Branch of it, in Order that he be perfect therein, as it is the Way I propose he shall get his Bread by, which is here a good Business, and his Eyes being Weak he can't learn any fine Work so well.

I take this Opportunity by Recommendation of Cap<sup>t</sup> Whipple, of recommending my s<sup>n</sup> son to you, & desiring you would do me the pleasure to bind or put him an Apprentice to the best Brick Layer you have in your Country, I would have that he was put to a good Sober Solid man, that was a master at his Business, & that had work enough to fully employ the said Year throughout, the more work the better, I would bind him for the Time of four Years, to a good Faithfull workman that would take pains with him to make him perfect at his Business.

I would look at no Expence, I will find him in all his Cloaths from head to foot, and what ever else is customary I shall be ready to do, and will leave the Affair with you to do for me the best you can, & I hope you will be his Friend thro' in a strange Land, in sickness, & health, & also that you will from time to time give him your good Counsel, & Admonitions as you see Occasion.

I send my son to work, and would have that he was constantly employ'd at his Business but more to learn and become a Master of the Trade in every Branch of it, (if there is Occasion for mathematical Instruments for him
I will be at the Expence of them) for which, if I find that my son has had pains taken with him, & becomes a master at the Business I shall be always ready & will satisfy Generously his Master for any extra pains he will take with him.

Gentlemen I presume upon your Friendship & humanity to my son in a strange Land, not doubting from your well known good Character, that you will have a Fatherly Eye Over my Child, & see that he learns his Business, & that he be kept in good Order, and made to Observe the Rules and Regulations of his Masters house, and what ever expence you are at, please to draw on me, Your Bills shall be duly honoured, and if there is any service, I can tender you here, which it is possible I may have in my Power to do you at some time Or another. You may rely upon it I never shall be wanting, but that my best services I wish attend you be assured off. I am Gentlemen with highest Esteem Your Most Obedient Humble

Servant at Sonoma

THE BOGMAN FAMILY.

THE earliest member of this family of whom we have any knowledge was JACOB BOGMAN, a wealthy planter of Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana, South America. He was also a ship-owner, and largely engaged in mercantile business.

By a first wife, whose maiden name and nationality have not been ascertained, he had one son, CHARLES LAURENS, and two daughters. At the time of his second marriage, to a lady of French lineage, his son was about seventeen years of age, a lively, pleasure-loving lad, who quickly grew discontented with the new order of home affairs. His father, therefore, concluded to send him to the United States, and, to prepare him for becoming a master builder, which was one of the largest enterprises in Paramaribo at that period, to place him where he could have superior advantages in learning the fundamental parts of his future profession.

A letter was written and forwarded to Messrs. Nicholas Brown & Co., of Providence, R. I., consigning Charles Laurens to their care. This letter has been carefully guarded; it is worn and broken in its folds, but the ink is clear and unfaded. As the signature is in a different writing from that of the body of the epistle, it was probably signed by Jacob Bogman to a form drawn out by a foreign correspondence clerk; a supposition which the idiomatic sentences seem to substantiate.

It is carefully and thoughtfully worded, and shows how much consideration was given to the forth-going of the young son, then about twenty years of age. There was not only the outlook for the young man's business career, the binding him to a good master, who was to keep him steadily employed all the year round, and train him to become skilled in all the branches of his trade, but, also, the desire to have him, "in that strange land," placed with a man who should feel a personal interest in and concern for his development in manly virtues, good citizenship, and moral and religious qualities.

That the firm assumed this responsibility, we know from a ledger account that was found by one of the descendants of Mr. Nicholas Brown. From its items, a picture could be drawn of the dress of a lad of the year 1767-68; with his fine suit of small-clothes and his big gold buckles at the knees and clasping his shoes.

CHARLES LAURENS<sup>2</sup> BOGMAN, born in Paramaribo, May, 1747; came to Providence, 1767; married, in Providence, R. I., April 5, 1772, Mary, a daughter of Ebenezer Scudder, "a most exemplary woman, whose ancestors came with the Pilgrims, in the 'Mayflower.'" She was born in Providence, April 6, 1749.

NANCY<sup>3</sup>, the oldest child of Charles Laurens<sup>2</sup> and Mary (Scudder) Bogman, married (1st) Stephen Hopkins, Oct. 5, 1792. They had one child, and both the father and the child died in 1796. She married (2d) Charles, a son of Alexander, 2d, and Hepsabeth (Hastings) Sampson, Feb. 1, 1798.

THEIR CHILDREN WERE:

1. LOUISA DANA<sup>4</sup>, b. Nov. 11, 1798; d. May 30, 1886.
2. DELLA ANN<sup>4</sup>, b. Aug. 29, 1800; d. Feb. 24, 1884.
3. SALLY<sup>4</sup>, b. March 22, 1802; d. Aug. 25, 1888.

Charles Sampson was sheriff of Providence County for several years. He was tender and warm-hearted, and often gave his own name, as bondsman, for persons under arrest, even though they were strangers, if he judged them to be worthy of trust. He was well known in his native city for his high sense of honor and justice.

His wife, Nancy (Bogman) Sampson, was a woman of small stature, refined, dignified, and gentle.

Her husband died when she was thirty-one years old, in 1805, and she was obliged to find means to support herself and her three young daughters. In this task, she labored faithfully and well, and her years of maternal self-devotion and self-sacrifice accomplished her purpose, though at great cost of strength.

As time went on, she was followed in her work by those for whom she had striven so zealously. Their characters were formed by the most intense and heroic forces. She influenced them to such development that at an early age they had deliberated upon and taken an advanced position, in regard to many important movements in the moral, intellectual, and religious world. They became earnest advocates of temperance reform; interested themselves in radical church influences; discussed ably and freely the question of slavery, years before any public manifestation of sympathy with freeing the Southern slaves was shown; and their great love of animals caused them to be warm supporters of their humane treatment.

THEIR CHILDREN WERE:

1. EDWARD SAMPSON<sup>5</sup>, b. Oct. 31, 1822; a graduate of Brown University; lawyer; d. Feb. 23, 1855.
2. LOUISA SAMPSON<sup>5</sup>, b. Dec. 13, 1826; m. Dec. 27, 1849, Charles Wetter, a son of Capt. Isaac and Eliza (Bullock) Bowen. Their children were:
  1. CHARLES WETTER<sup>6</sup>, Jr., b. Jan. 22, 1851.
  2. RICHARD<sup>6</sup>, b. Dec. 10, 1852.
  3. ELIZA BULLOCK<sup>6</sup>, b. Oct. 8, 1854.
  4. LOUISA<sup>6</sup>, b. Dec. 8, 1856.
  5. MARY ANNA<sup>6</sup>, b. Nov. 10, 1860; d. Jan. 13, 1883.

Richard Cornell Martin, on leaving school, entered his father's employ, and at last succeeded him in business; from which he retired about the year 1848, after the firm had been continued for three generations of the same family, for nearly one hundred years. He was a man of marked energy, keen observation, and excellent judgment. His wise discretion, ability in business and in financial matters caused his advice to be often sought in weighty cases. He was, for years, one of the leading directors in the Merchants Bank, in the management of which he felt a great interest.

DELIA<sup>4</sup>, the second daughter of Nancy<sup>3</sup> (Bogman) and Charles Sampson, from one of the diseases incidental to childhood, was blind for nearly five years. As her sight returned, she became an eager, devoted student. At the age of thirty-eight years, she suffered from nervous prostration of the whole system, which, increased by a fall, centred in the spinal column, and rendered her at first a partial, then a complete invalid, during the remainder of her long life. She was exceedingly well-informed on all subjects, and, possessing a strong, active, and well-disciplined brain, could intelligently discuss and argue, in a statesman-like manner and with wonderful power, all religious, political, and financial affairs. Her memory was notably retentive and exact, dates and details being at her command up to the very last year of her life. Very early, she was led to study Swedenborg's works and teachings, and a belief in the truths that he formulated was a source of great delight and comfort to her.

SALLY<sup>4</sup>, the youngest child of Nancy<sup>3</sup> (Bogman) and Charles Sampson, was of a calm, beautiful temperament; had a bright, sunny disposition, and possessed clear, keen observation and fine conversational powers. For nearly fifty years she cheerfully worked in self-maintenance, and that achieved, she devoted herself, mainly, to the care of her invalid sister. She always regarded her lot as a blessed one, and was always striving to alleviate the lives of those whom she deemed less favored than herself by the gifts of the kind Father to whom she looked as the author of all that is good and beautiful on earth.

The lives of these sisters were entirely passed in their native State. Delia was outside of its limits but once, and Sally never passed its boundaries. During the eighty-two years of their existence, they spent only one night in separate apartments. Their enjoyment was in and for each other, and their sympathies found scope in forwarding the efforts to secure humane treatment for dumb animals, and the general amelioration of human kind.

"Capt. James<sup>3</sup> Bogman was one of seven brothers, who, all but two, were ship-masters. He made many successful voyages, but sailed at last from Norfolk, Va., only to meet one of the violent storms which are characteristic of that coast. He was 'spoken' once, but was never heard from again. His widow lived to a great age.

"Their oldest child, Elizabeth<sup>4</sup> (Bogman) Pope, was finely constituted; with strong mental powers, which made her gain wide knowledge, and exercise vigorous judgment upon questions of public weal; and with practical self-denial, which led her to the diligent performance of the manifold duties of a wife and mother. She infused great ambition and desire for good into her children, and was a most sagacious and loving counsellor; she was a woman who was always interested in travels and discoveries, and was constantly widening her mind by reading all the literature she could obtain on such subjects.

"It would have been a great source of gratification and happiness to her, if it could have been her privilege to cross the ocean, and visit foreign lands and people, or to have seen the extent and scenery of her native land. But, although she was debarred from such opportunities, she imbued her children with the same desires, and some of them have had chances for travel that would have gratified her very much.

"Life brought her many trials, many tasks; but she neither flinched from those nor shirked these. Ill-health came upon her, such as would have been sufficient ground for inactivity, invalidism; but she always found some way of being useful. She was spared to celebrate, with her husband, their golden wedding, in the autumn of 1884. It was a delightful occasion. Five of the bridegroom's brothers and sisters were present; the ages of the six aggregating four hundred and forty-eight years ; making an average of seventy-four years apiece. Many other relatives attended, beside a host of friends, old and young. All was joy and thankfulness. But she had only a few more months to stay in this earthly house. On the 10th of February, 1885, while suffering from acute bronchitis, she was seized with paralysis of the heart, and quickly fell asleep.

"Mr. Charles Pope was in the furniture and feather trade early in life. He afterwards engaged in the real-estate business, in which he continued many years. He also attended to general business, such as settling large estates. He has been a justice of the peace thirty-five years. He resided in Brookline while his family were growing up, but has had his home in the heart of Boston for a considerable period."

The hereditary instinct for travelling, transmitted through the mother, has found intense expression in the children. "Two of them have circled the globe. Her eldest son, Charles<sup>5</sup> Allen, from earliest youth dreamed of seeing the world, and at the age of seventeen, started to seek his fortune in foreign lands. For six years, he went hither and thither in both hemispheres ; rounded Cape Horn to San Francisco, at the time of the gold fever ; crossed the Pacific Ocean to China, went to India, Australia, the Cape of Good Hope and to other points in Africa ; from there to Europe and South America, and then, his love of travel well gratified, he settled down to a quiet life in his native land."

He married Julia Anne, daughter of Henry and Sarah (Blackman) Mellish, April 3, 1860.

THEIR CHILDREN WERE :

1. HARRY M.<sup>6</sup>,                      b. Oct. 15, 1861.
2. LUELLA FRANCES<sup>6</sup>, b. March 7, 1864.
3. ADA EVELYN,<sup>6</sup>              b. Jan. 23, 1866 ; d. Sept. 13, 1867.

"ALBERT AUGUSTUS<sup>5</sup>, the second son of Elizabeth<sup>4</sup> (Bogman) and Charles Pope, studied in the public schools of Brookline, and then was trained in Brooks & McCuen's

'leather findings' business, in Boston. Aug. 22, 1862, he entered the 35th Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, and was appointed second lieutenant. In spite of his extreme youth, he was promoted first lieutenant, March 23, 1863, and received a captain's commission, April 1, 1864. He was employed upon important detached services, and acted as commander of this regiment on many occasions, in the absence of its colonel.

"He organized a regiment of artillery for the defence of Washington; took part in the chief Virginia campaigns; and served under Burnside, in Tennessee. He was brevetted major 'for gallant conduct at the battle of Fredericksburg, Va.'; and lieutenant-colonel 'for gallant conduct in the battles of Knoxville, Poplar Springs Church, and in front of Petersburg,' March 13, 1865.

"After the war, Col. Pope returned to his employers; but before very long went into business for himself. He established the manufactory of slipper decorations and of shoemakers' supplies in general. He organized and became president of the Pope Manufacturing Company, of Boston, in which he holds a controlling interest; which made and sold several patented articles; but which, finally, became engrossed in the construction and sale of bicycles and tricycles. He has been justly termed the 'founder of American bicycle industries.' He is also president of the Municipal Signal Company; a director in the Weed Sewing Machine Company, the Boston Cab Company, and several other corporations.

"Three of the sons of Elizabeth<sup>4</sup> (Bogman) Pope, Arthur,<sup>5</sup> Albert A.<sup>5</sup>, and Louis A.<sup>5</sup>, have already crossed this continent as far as California; have visited the Yosemite, the Big Trees, and the Geysers, as well as many other places of interest. Col. Albert A. Pope has also visited Yellowstone Park and Mexico, in addition to crossing the continent and making eight trips to Europe.

"Thus Mrs. Pope<sup>4</sup>, although deprived of the delights of travel for herself, impressed her individuality so strongly upon her children that, as a family, they are living out her desires; and, if their lives are spared, they hope to do even more in the future than they have done in the past." How surely this shows the force of heredity; the transmission of wandering instinct from that vaguely known forefather in Dutch Guiana, who started the line before 1767, that has led his descendants across seas and continents; through perilous delights in time of war, and, while it lies dormant in many of his more immediate posterity, awakes with vigorous force in the younger generations.

Col. Pope<sup>5</sup> married Abby, daughter of George and Matilda (Smallwood) Linder, of Newton, Mass., Sept. 20, 1871.

THEIR CHILDREN WERE :

1. ALBERT LINDER<sup>6</sup>,      b. July 14, 1872.
2. MARY LINDER<sup>6</sup>,      b. March 9, d. June 9, 1874.
3. MARGARET ROBERTS<sup>6</sup>, b. May 29, 1876.
4. HAROLD LINDER<sup>5</sup>,    b. Nov. 5, 1879.
5. CHARLES LINDER<sup>6</sup>,    b. Nov. 15, 1881.
6. LINDER<sup>6</sup>,              b. March 23, 1887.

EMILY FRANCES<sup>5</sup> and CAROLINE AUGUSTA<sup>5</sup>, twin daughters of Elizabeth<sup>4</sup> (Bogman) and Charles Pope, were graduated at the New England Female Medical College, Boston, Mass., in 1870. They took additional studies in hospitals in Paris and in London, and continued to study in the New England Hospital for Women and Children until 1873, when they began practice in Boston. They are attending physicians at that hospital; members of the New England Hospital Medical Society, and of the Massachusetts Medical Society. They have visited Europe twice. The first time was in 1870, and in the midst of stirring events, as they were in Paris whilst the Empire was at its height; when the Franco-Prussian war was in progress; during the overthrow of the Empire and the proclamation of the Republic; and were inmates of Paris during part of the siege. They have travelled quite extensively, North and South, in their own country. In the summer of 1889 they crossed the continent by the Canadian Pacific Railroad to Victoria and Vancouver's Island; went as far north as Alaska, and returned through Dakota and Minnesota and the Yellowstone National Park. They now reside in Boston.

ARTHUR WALLACE<sup>5</sup>, the seventh child of Elizabeth<sup>4</sup> (Bogman) and Charles Pope, is the head of the firm of A. W. Pope & Co., dealers in shoe manufacturers' supplies, in Boston. October, 1887, he crossed this continent and sailed from San Francisco for Japan; stopping at the Sandwich Islands on his way. Leaving Japan, he went to China, to Singapore, to the islands of the Malay Archipelago, and to the island of Ceylon. Here he was invited to join an elephant hunt. For that purpose, he went far back into the interior, and spent two weeks at that sport. A huge elephant was brought to the ground, and its forefeet are now in the possession of Mr. Pope, who has had them mounted as footstools, the covers of which are the skins of leopards that were shot by himself.

From Ceylon, he travelled through India, by way of Madras and Calcutta, and on to the Himalaya Mountains, where he ascended the noted Manuring Pass, 18,600 feet above the level of the sea. He visited the places made famous as the scenes of the Indian mutiny, such as Lucknow, Cawnpore, Delhi, Agra, and many others. From here he went to Bombay, and sailed across the Arabian Sea to the Red Sea, to the Isthmus of Suez. Crossing this, he proceeded to Alexandria and Cairo, in Egypt; visited the Pyramids and Sphinx; boated up the Nile as far as the first cataract, and viewed the famous ruins of Karnak and Luxor, with their ancient tombs and remarkable carvings, four, five, and six thousand years old.

On his return from that trip, he sailed for the Holy Land; visited Jerusalem, Bethlehem, and all the places of note mentioned in the Scriptures. From there, he went to Damascus, to the ancient ruins of Baalbec, to Cyprus, Smyrna, Rhodes; up the Ægean Archipelago to Athens; through the sea of Bosphorus to Constantinople; through Bulgaria, Roumania, Servia, and Austro-Hungary to Italy. There he ascended Mt. Vesuvius, and went from thence to Switzerland, France, and England. From there he passed on to Norway, the land of the midnight sun; travelled up to the North Cape, and returned overland, through Sweden, Denmark, Holland, and Belgium, from whence he sailed for home.

He married July 22, 1869, Frances, daughter of William and Frances (Walker) Cook, of Brookline, Mass.

LOUIS ATHERTON<sup>5</sup>, the youngest son of Charles and Elizabeth<sup>4</sup> (Bogman) Pope, was graduated from Brown University in 1874, and from Newton Theological Seminary in 1877. He was ordained and installed pastor of the Baptist Church in Mansfield, Mass., Aug. 30, 1877, and continued there until November, 1879. He became pastor at Phoenix, R. I., July 4, 1880, and closed his labors there March 1, 1884; after which time, he accepted a call to a church in Warren, R. I., and remained there until he assumed a pastorate in Newburyport, Mass., where he now lives.

Sept. 4, 1877, he married Imogene, a daughter of James H. and Miranda (Pierce) Titus.

THEIR CHILDREN WERE:

4. ELIZABETH BOGMAN<sup>6</sup>, b. July 8, 1885.

In the summer of 1890, Rev. Louis Atherton Pope started for an extended tour through the principal cities of Europe, and to visit all places of interest in the Old World.

"William, a son of Frederick and Mary (Pierce) Pope, was born in Dorchester, Mass., Aug. 12, 1814; married (1st) Aug. 12, 1840, Mary<sup>4</sup>, daughter of James<sup>3</sup> and Parley (Nelson) Bogman, of Boston. She was a woman of strong, healthful impulses, was sympathetic, benevolent, affectionate. Though devoted to her family, she found time to carry practical help to the sick or afflicted in their homes. Delicate and sensitive in her feelings, she could summon great resolution and composure to meet trying emergencies. She was a sister of Elizabeth, the wife of her husband's twin brother, Charles; and they and their two families maintained the most unalloyed harmony. While differing in physique and in mental qualities, the two sisters were much alike in the force and value of their characters, and as mothers, each contributed greatly to the development and happiness of the whole 'double' family. She died in the triumph of Christian faith, Dec. 8, 1876."

"Mr. William Pope was bred to the crockery business, and continued in it about forty-five years; he was senior partner in the firm of Pope & Waldron for several years. Then he had a long connection with the house of John Collamore & Co., a partner of the same concern, under the style of Curtis, Collamore & Co., doing a very extensive wholesale and retail business. After the dissolution of this firm he was with Richard Briggs in the same line. He was an ideal salesman; keeping himself informed as to the history of the quality of each brand of goods, developing taste akin to that of a Pallisy or a Wedgwood."

His habits were quiet. He loved books and art and nature. In person he was below medium height, with a pleasant, intellectual face, and winning expression. His voice was gentle and peaceful. It was good to meet him; most delightful to be recognized by him as one of the inner circle. He was a member of the Baptist Church, as were his brother Charles, their wives, and several of their children.

"GEORGE<sup>5</sup>, son of William and Mary<sup>4</sup> (Bogman) Pope, as a boy, entered the wholesale dry-goods house of Wilson, Hamilton & Co., Boston, and rose from one position to another in the business. In the War of the Rebellion, he enlisted in the 44th Mass. Volunteer Infantry, and was in service with the regiment, until discharged for promotion. He was commissioned captain, and placed in command of Company I, in the 54th Mass., the first regiment of colored troops organized in the Northern States, and he remained with it until the close of the war. He saw hard service; was wounded; was promoted major, Dec. 3, 1864, and lieutenant-colonel, July 11, 1865."

Since the war he has been in the lumber business, for the most part; for several years he has been the Montreal agent of the Export Lumber Company, shipping cargoes to many ports. He spends his winters in Boston. He married Nov. 24, 1873, Annie Atwood, daughter of Lathley and Mary Baylies (Dean) Rich, of Watertown, and had:

MARION<sup>6</sup>, b. Dec. 18, 1874.

"EDWARD WALDRON<sup>5</sup>, son of William and Mary<sup>4</sup> (Bogman) Pope, began business life as a clerk in the store of Frank

Skinner & Co., dealers in woollens. In the fall of 1868 he made a change to out-of-door employment, and took a position in the lumber yard of Shepard, Hall & Co. He was chosen secretary of the Pope Manufacturing Company at its organization, and has remained in that house up to the present time, and is now the treasurer of the corporation. Sept. 2, 1875, he married Florence Anna, daughter of Augustus Franklin and Hannah (Bright) Leman, of Andover, Mass., and had one daughter :

BENJAMIN E.<sup>5</sup>, the sixth child of Sarah<sup>4</sup> (Bogman) and James S. Sweet married Ella A. Jacobs, Nov. 1, 1876, and had one daughter :

MARION ELMORE<sup>6</sup>, b. in Malden, Nov. 4, 1883.

He is a book-keeper ; a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

JOSEPH<sup>3</sup>, the youngest son of Charles Laurens<sup>2</sup> and Mary (Scudder) Bogman, was born in Providence, R. I. By profession, he was a master builder and a surveyor of lumber. In his business relations, his rectitude, uprightness, integrity, and strict honesty in all matters won the respect of every one with whom he dealt.

He possessed remarkable foresight and acumen ; was much in advance of his age in many ways, but more especially in regard to the subject of temperance, wherein he foresaw many reforms that have since been instituted. He also predicted many of the improvements that were later established in regard to methods and efficient enactments of important missionary labors.

He early became a member of the First Baptist Church, and was always deeply interested in its relations, and gave much time, thought, and money to religious purposes. He was benevolent and markedly generous. A friend who knew him well, says, "Of all generous persons, he was the most so of many acquaintances." He was a man who was widely known; whose genial, social qualities drew a large circle of devoted friends about him; more especially in the child-world, as he was a devoted lover of the little ones, whom they highly prized and whose companionship they eagerly sought.

Oct. 30, 1813, he married Ann Goss, of Providence, of which city she was a native. She was born Feb. 12, 1792. Like him, she was a fond lover of children and child-life, and cherished this sentiment in her own family. She was a woman of lively and tender sympathies, and of a noticeably amiable and lovely disposition, which caused her to shed a sweet influence over all who came within her circle, so that her very presence was a "kind benediction."

Although she was an invalid for long years, and oftentimes a severe sufferer, yet her courage did not fail, and her buoyant, bright bearing made her home a sweet and sunny centre. By this feeble health she was debarred, for a long, long time, from attendance upon the church service, which she would have so much enjoyed; but this did not dull her interest in church work, nor prevent her from doing all that lay in her power to forward its cause. After protracted sufferings, bravely borne, she died, March 31, 1852; her husband died March 27, 1844.

FRANCES MEHITABLE<sup>4</sup>, the fourth child of Joseph<sup>3</sup> and Ann (Goss) Bogman, was born in Providence, R. I.; attended the private schools of that city and the Quaker school of Miss Kempton, in New Bedford, Mass. She has a bright, cheerful disposition, like her father, which gives her a sunny outlook on life and its disciplining through much physical suffering. As a lively school-girl, she was a favorite with teachers and comrades, and her cordial, hearty manner of meeting her friends assures them of the warmth of her interest, and the readiness to be pleased with whatever they may have for her attention; whilst her generous heart and hospitable impulses make them feel that she is ever ready to minister to their comfort and happiness.

As a wife and mother her years have been filled with active, busy days, that were rounded by duties that have been conscientiously and efficiently performed; whilst her sound judgment, clear insight, and ready reception of the thoughts of others, and swift response to those thoughts, make her opinion and decision of value and good use.

She married Moses Conant Warren, in North Attleborough, Mass., Oct. 12, 1842.

THEIR CHILDREN WERE :

1. WILLIAM HENRY<sup>5</sup>, b. in Providence, R. I., June 21, 1843.

7. NELLIE<sup>5</sup>, b. in Brookline, Oct. 11, 1859; d. Nov. 29, 1868.

Moses Conant, the youngest son of Thomas and Betsey (Conant) Warren, was born in Cavendish, Vt., and came to Boston when he was four years old. He attended school in that city, and then was clerk in the grocery store of Henry Lincoln; from there he went to school in New Hampton, N. H. Upon his return to Boston, he was a clerk with Jonathan Parker, hardware dealer on Union Street, where he remained until April 1, 1841, at which date he began a business for himself at No. 9 Dock Square, in the same building where, after a period of active and successful business life for nearly fifty years, he is still to be found, the oldest hardware dealer in Boston.

He is a life member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society; a member of the Boston Baptist Social Union, the Webster Historical Society, the Vermont Association of Boston, and of the Old School Boys' Association. He is an active and deeply interested member of the Baptist Church of Brookline, and one of its most devoted and liberal supporters. "He commands the confidence of every one by his strict integrity and by his high sense of honor in all his dealings. His methods are systematic; he has good executive ability and clear judgment."

WILLIAM HENRY<sup>5</sup>, the oldest son of Moses Conant and Francis M.<sup>4</sup> (Bogman) Warren, was in the Brookline public schools, and left the High School when he was eighteen years old, to take a position in his father's store.

Thursday, Sept. 4, 1862, he went into camp at Readville, Mass., and on Friday, he was mustered into the United States service, in Company C, Forty-fourth Regiment, for nine months. Oct. 23 his regiment sailed from Boston, in the steamer "Merrimac," for Newbern, N. C., and arrived at that place on the 27th. He was in the battle at Rawles Mills, Nov. 2; his regiment started on the Goldsboro expedition, Dec. 2, and engaged in the battles of Kinston, Dec. 14; Whitehall, Dec. 16, Goldsboro, Dec. 17. They went to Little Washington, N. C., March 16, 1863, and were there about six weeks, being in a state of siege for eighteen days. On June 11 he arrived in Boston, received an honorable discharge from the service on the 18th, and immediately re-entered his father's store. He became a partner in the business, 1871.

He joined Harmony Lodge, No. 68, I. O. O. F., Sept. 25, 1874; became a member of Post 66, G. A. R., 1870; of the Medford Council, Royal Arcanum, No. 94, 1873; instituted the Warren Lodge (which was named in honor of him), A. O. U. W., Aug. 7, 1879. He has filled all the offices in the I. O. O. F.; was post quartermaster six years; has held most of the offices in the Royal Arcanum, in the A. O. U. W., and has been an officer of the Grand Lodge.

He married Ann Jane, daughter of Benjamin Franklin and Sophronia (Pierce) Oakes, in Cohasset, Mass., Dec. 22, 1868.

THEIR CHILDREN WERE:

1. NELLIE<sup>6</sup>, b. in Cohasset, Mass., April 11, 1870.
2. EMILY STANHOPE<sup>6</sup>, b. in Medford, Mass., Sept. 5, 1872.
3. MARY GERTRUDE<sup>6</sup>, b. in Medford, Mass., May 8, 1875.
4. CORINNE BRADFORD<sup>6</sup>, b. in Medford, Mass., Nov. 25, 1881.

Mrs. Ann Jane Oakes, the wife of William Henry<sup>5</sup> Warren, is a lineal descendant of the Rev. Urian Oakes, who was a son of Edward and Jane Oakes, of Cambridge, Mass. "He was born in England, 1631; was brought to New England when a child; was graduated at Harvard College, 1649. One year after, he published a set of astronomical calculations, entitled 'An Almanack for the Year of Our Lord, 1650.' Soon after, he went to Tichfield, County Hampshire, England, and was settled over a congregation there. Being silenced for non-conformity, 1662, he found an asylum with a private family, was chaplain for one of the most 'noted individuals in the kingdom,' and preached for another congregation.

"Such was his celebrity for learning and piety, that the church and society in Cambridge, Mass., on the decease of the Rev. Mr. Mitchell, in 1668, sent a messenger to England to invite him to become their minister. After some delay, he accepted the invitation, but did not begin his labors until Nov. 8, 1671. He was placed at the head of the college after Dr. Hoar's death, and commenced performing the duties of the office, April 7, 1675; still retaining the charge of his flock.

"In 1680, the corporation persuaded him to be inaugurated, and to devote himself exclusively to the duties of the college. Accordingly, on Commencement Day, August, 1680, he was installed by Gov. Bradstreet, in College Hall, and thus became the fourth president of Harvard College. He was a man of extensive erudition and distinguished usefulness. He excelled equally as a scholar, a divine, and a Christian. In the opinion of Cotton Mather, America never had a greater master of the pure, Ciceronian Latin."

He married Ruth, a daughter of William Ames.

THEIR CHILDREN WERE:

1. URIAN, b. 1657; H. C. 1678; d. 1679.
2. EDWARD, b. 1659; H. C. 1679.
3. HANNAH, m. Rev. Samuel Angier; d. Aug. 15, 1714.
4. LAWRENCE, b. 1661; d. June 21, 1677.

Rev. Urian Oakes died July 25, 1681, in the fiftieth year of his age, and the tenth of his ministry.

GEORGE EDWARD<sup>5</sup>, the third child of Moses Conant and Frances M. (Bogman) Warren, attended the Brookline grammar and high schools. At first he went into a wholesale dry-goods house as a clerk; then, for four years, he had a position in the largest leather-dealing house in Boston, and afterwards passed one year in a dry-goods and shoe house in Kansas City.

In 1876 he became, for one year, one of the proprietors of the newspaper called the Richmond Inquirer. In 1878 he connected himself with the Baltimore Newspaper Union, and remained with it until Dec. 1, 1881. That same month and year he was elected president of the Union Printing Company, of New York City, which makes a specialty of furnishing the "patent inside or outside newspaper." The Atlanta newspaper was started March 10, 1883, and he was elected secretary and a trustee of that company.

Oct. 11, 1880, he married Mary Talitha, the daughter of Samuel S. and Mary A. (Walker) Linthicum, of Baltimore, Md.

THEIR CHILDREN WERE:

1. MARY FRANCES<sup>6</sup>, b. in Baltimore, Aug. 7, 1881; d. in Brookline, Mass., Feb. 9, 1882.
2. GEORGE LINTHICUM<sup>6</sup>, b. in Baltimore, Oct. 22, 1883.

The early close of George E. Warren's useful and busy life, on Jan. 9, 1890, was sudden and unexpected, although several years of debility had marked his decline from perfect health. The following notice was taken from the Brooklyn Daily Eagle, of Jan. 10, 1890:—

"DEATH OF MR. GEORGE E. WARREN.

"After but one day's confinement to his home, 468 Washington Avenue, Mr. George E. Warren died yesterday of pneumonia, superinduced by the influenza. Mr. Warren was president of the Union Printing Company, of New York, and a stockholder in other large printing companies in various cities. He was a director of the Brooklyn Choral Society, in which he took much interest, and was a member of Masonic, Odd Fellows, and Knights Templar bodies in Brooklyn and Staunton, Va. He was a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen; of Patapsco Lodge, American Legion of Honor, and Washington and Pacific Lodges,

I. O. O. F., of Baltimore, and belonged to Manhattan Commandery of Knights Templar.

"Mr. Warren was born in Brookline, Mass., Oct. 11, 1850. He was a most benevolent man, and will be mourned by many friends, not only in Brooklyn, but throughout Eastern Massachusetts. At 8 o'clock this evening, funeral services will be conducted at the house on Washington Avenue, by the Rev. Dr. Charles Homer, of St. James Episcopal Church. Mr. Warren leaves a widow and one child. His remains will be taken to Mount Auburn, Cambridge, Mass., for interment," as it was his dying request that his remains should be sent to his parents' home in Brookline, and from there be placed beside his sister Nellie, in the family lot.

MARY FRANCES<sup>5</sup>, the oldest daughter of Frances M. (Bogman) and Moses Conant Warren, married James Henry, son of James Henry and Ann Maria White (Reed) Beals, of Boston, in Brookline, Jan. 1, 1872.

THEIR CHILDREN WERE :

1. ANNIE REED<sup>6</sup>,      b. in Brookline, Dec. 14, 1872.
2. HARRY WARREN<sup>6</sup>, b. in Brookline, April 12, 1875.
3. FLORENCE<sup>6</sup>,      b. in New York City, Oct. 27, 1881.
4. HAROLD<sup>6</sup>,        b. in New York City, Nov. 3, 1885.

James Henry Beals, Jr., was born in Boston, Nov. 14, 1849. His father and grandfather had each been large stockholders in the Boston Post, and at the age of eighteen he was employed in its work. In January, 1872, as he had been overworked, he, with his wife, started for Europe. They sailed first for the Azores; from thence to the Continent. They travelled about in various parts of Portugal, Italy, Switzerland, France, and England; then, at the end of some six months' journeying, they returned to Brookline, and Mr. Beals resumed his position on the staff of the Post, where he was in charge of the advertising department for a number of years.

In 1875, in conjunction with two gentlemen from the

New York Tribune office, he bought the Richmond (Va.) Inquirer. After a three months' experience, dissatisfied with the idea, they severed the connection, and he returned to Boston. In 1877 he bought a part interest in the New York Newspaper Union. This is a co-operative interest, by which all parties are benefited, and took its rise in this wise: Mr. A. J. Aikens, of the Milwaukee firm of Cramer, Aikens & Cramer, in 1846, "while yet an apprentice to the printing business, conceived the idea of printing the general news and miscellany of a newspaper, together with the general advertising, upon one side of a sheet, at a metropolitan office, and of leaving the other side a blank, which could be filled in with local matter at the special offices where they would be used. This was to be done at so low a rate that hundreds of newspapers would find it for their interest to take these half-printed sheets.

"From a crude and small beginning, a quarter of a century ago, the co-operative system has grown to be an enormous business, embracing, at the present time, nearly seven thousand American newspapers. One of its best improvements has been the introduction of a union of different publication houses, in various parts of the country, from which it furnishes its patrons with papers in the different States covered by its lists.

"Jan. 6, 1877, Mr. Beals was elected president of this Union, in place of Mr. Aikens, who had resigned, and had disposed of his interest in the business. In 1879, Mr. Beals started a like Union in Baltimore, Md. In 1883, 1884, and 1886, the Pittsburg (Pa.), Charlotte (N. C.), and the Birmingham (Ala.) unions were formed, all of which are in successful operation at the present time. Mr. Beals was also, in 1883, elected president of the Atlanta (Ga.) Newspaper Union, a system wholly distinct from that of the New York Newspaper Union. When he acquired his interest in the latter, it had a list of two hundred and seventy-five papers. Now, with its branches and other connections, it issues one thousand four hundred papers, which are combined, for advertising purposes, under the name of the Atlantic Coast Lists. These circulate an aggregate of more than a million of copies each week. In order to conduct this immense business, forty fast presses are in use and forty tons of paper are consumed weekly. Up to the present time, the aggregate circulation is fully a million copies weekly, which have some five million readers." In 1880 the New England Newspaper Union was started.

CHARLES BOGMAN<sup>5</sup>, the youngest son of Frances M. (Bogman) and Moses Conant Warren, was a pupil in the public schools of Brookline, and then, as he was in delicate health, he was sent to the Mystic Valley Institute, Mystic Bridge, Conn., to be under the care and instruction of Capt. John K. Bucklyn, the principal of that institution. He was there four years, and then returned home, July, 1875, and became a clerk in his father's store, 1876, where he continues to give faithful and devoted services.

GEORGE EDWARD<sup>4</sup>, the sixth child of Joseph and Ann (Goss) Bogman, was a pupil in the private schools of Providence, R. I., until 1842, when he went to Boston and became a clerk in Moses C. Warren's store, and remained there until he bought the stock and good-will of Messrs. Bell & Richards, hardware dealers, at No. 7 Dock Square. He carried on a large and prosperous business there, until 1866, when he took Mr. James W. Vinal into partnership, and they continued together until ill-health obliged him to sell out to Mr. Vinal, Dec. 3, 1881.

He joined the Baptist Church in early life, and gave much time and money to its various needs. He was an efficient member of the Boston Baptists' Social Union, for many years. He was a very genial man, of a happy disposition, and his kindly bearing drew many warm friends about him. These traits served him well in social, religious, and business life, and made his position in all of these circles one of strength and helpfulness.

April 23, 1845, he married Adeline M. Young, of Providence, R. I., in New York City, and then resided in Boston, Mass., for a short time ; removing from thence to Brookline, Mass, where he died Jan. 30, 1882.

THEIR CHILDREN WERE :

1. EDWARD YOUNG<sup>5</sup>, b. in Boston, Feb. 24, 1849.
2. GEORGE WALLACE<sup>5</sup>, b. in Boston, Sept 24, 1852.

“ Year after year, in a glad content,
In and out of our home he went ;
Ever for us the skies were clear ;
His heart carried the doubt and fear.”

EDWARD YOUNG<sup>5</sup>, the elder son of George<sup>4</sup> Edward and Adeline M. (Young) Bogman, was a pupil in the public schools of Brookline, Mass., until 1866, when he left the High School, and began a business career in a large commission house in Boston, where he remained for nearly two years ; then, in January, 1868, he took a preparatory course of study under Capt. John K. Bucklyn, A. M., of Mystic Valley Institute, Mystic Bridge, Conn., and entered Brown University the next autumn. He was graduated, receiving the degree of A. B. in 1873, and immediately entered the Harvard Medical School, and after pursuing the full course of study, took the degree of M. D. in 1876.

During that summer he was house physician at the Boston Lying-in Hospital. The next October, he associated himself with Dr. A. H. Okie, of Providence, R. I., which association lasted until Dr. Okie's death, in 1882 ; after which event, he practised alone until October of the ensuing year, 1883, when he sailed for Europe, with his wife. He followed a five months' course in medicine in the hospitals and at the University of Prague, and supplemented it with another course of study of three months at the University of Vienna. These ended, he took a "summer tramp" through the Alpine region ; starting at the eastern extremity, near Vienna, and ending in their western province, in the vicinity of Geneva. From thence, he returned to Providence, where he is now in practice, paying special attention to the diseases of the throat and nose.

He is a member of the Rhode Island Historical Society, the A. E. Club, the Rhode Island Wheelmen, the Alumni Association of the Delta Kappa Epsilon Society, of the Upsilon Chapter of Brown University, and of the Rhode Island Yacht Club.

April 2, 1879, he married Lucy, daughter of John and Amy (Thurber) Gorham, of Providence; they had one daughter:

MARY<sup>6</sup>, b. Jan. 20, 1881; d. y.

Lucy (Gorham) Bogman died Oct. 16, 1889.

GEORGE WALLACE<sup>5</sup>, the younger son of George Edward<sup>4</sup> and Adeline M. (Young) Bogman, received a course of instruction in the Brookline public schools, and at the Mystic Valley Institute, Mystic Bridge, Conn., 1869. In 1870 he became a clerk in his father's store, and held that position for nearly eight years. He then started in more active pursuits; went to Texas, bought a sheep ranch, and dealt in cattle and wool until 1883. After this experiment he purchased a large farm in Peabody, Kansas, and worked it for three years. In December, 1886, he went to Georgia, and interested himself in the Atlanta Newspaper Union, with which he is still connected:

He is a member of the Georgia Master Mason Lodge, No. 96; the Georgia Mount Zion Chapter, No. 16; the Knights Templar, No. 4, and the Brookline Sagamore Council, No. 181, R. A. Oct. 2, 1880, he married Dora Anita, daughter of James H. Beals, and has one son:

GEORGE WALLACE BOGMAN, Jr., b. Oct. 21, 1889.
